Chicago, July 6.-"John D. Reckefeller." Judge K. M. Landis called the name in an ordinary matter of fact tone in the federal court room here at 10:50 o'clock this morning, but the words were heard in every corner of the room, which was packed to the point of suffocation. Then, in the midst of a silence that was almost breathless, the man who is reputed to be the richest in the world arose and walked toward the witness chair which he has so long fought with all the influence of his great wealth to avoid.

Attorneys Whispered With Judge. As soon as Mr. Rockefeller's name was called the attorneys for the Standard Oil company made a united descent upon Judge Landis's desk and began a whispered conversation with the judge. Mr. Rockefeller, midway in his course to the witness chair, stopped indecisively, "Sit right still a moment, John," said his brother William Rockefeller, and the witness returned to the chair he had left.

Mr. Miller and Mr. Rosenthal, attorneys for the Standard, and Mr. Sims, the United States district at torney, and his assistant, Mr. Wilkerson, and A. A. Eddy, Chicago attorney for the Standard, were all leaning over Judge Landis's desk. The conference stretched into minutes. The low hum of their conversation could only just be distinguished by the sweltering spectators who sat motionless in an effort to catch even

"Well, what is your general impression of what the business of the Standard Oil company is?"

"They have refineries to refine oil. This is as near as I can say without Landis asked if he knew anything of a study of the charter."

Again came the objection from Mr. Miller, Mr. Rosenthal joini g. Again Judge Landis overruled the objections and proceeded with his questioning.

THE WINE ROOM CASES.

The other day there was chronicled the fact that a negress had been arrested and fined for "frequenting wine rooms," and in connection with the case it was stated that the officers had told the proprietor of the wine room that if he continued to allow omen to come into his place of busin is he would be liable to ar-

Now the question naturally arises as to why he was not arrested at the time the woman was.

Surely if she was guilty, and she must have been, as she was punished, why was not the wine room owner arrested when she was and punished also, as was she.

The fact is that the authorities have in the past and are now wilfully and knowingly allowing these wine rooms to continue in business without even a pretense of any sort of regulation.

Time and again, some degraded, besotten creature who has been allowed, for a few paltry nickels or dimes, to pollute herself still more in drunkenness and vice, has been arrested for having been found in these dens of iniquity, but never yet has one of the owners of the places been taken along with the unfortunate creature, whose patronage he has sought.

These cases, when they are known, are so vile and disgusting that they land rival. nauseate people who possess even the slightest semblance of decency.

Generally, in fact, almost always, urged to come in and patronize these dens, their orders are taken gladly so long as they or their companions have the price with which to pay, but when the money has been exhausted their presence becomes a nuisance and nine times out of ten the bartender sends out for an officer to remove them.

NEEDS OF THE SOUTH.

Again the matter of immigration into the south is up for discussion. The movement, to which more or less attention has been given of late is being extended so as to include practically the entire south and southwest. For while the south needs labor in the various productive industries to the importance of which it awakening, the southwest wants settlers, and is getting them, and the settlers want help in the fields that are all ready, wih proper cultivation and effort, to turn rich crops of grain, cotton and fruit. The need is such that it is proposed to open new avenues for accessions and New Orleans and Galveston are planning new steamship lines to run directly to and from those ports and Europe and to carry to southern shores much needed brawn and muscle. DEMAND FOR FREE PEANUTS.

From Massachusetts, the land of the sacred codfish, comes a demand for a reduction of the tariff on peanuts. The Boston Transcript voices the demand. Peanuts are no longer a luxury, says our contemporary. They are a necessity. They are "the staple for almost every gathering for entertainment from the Sunday school pic nic to the four ringed circus." Commercial statistics tell the story. In 1889 there were 204,000 acres devoted George Hayden, on Engineer street, to peanut culture. In 1899 the area had increased to 517,000 acres. There is no record of the increase of acreage since 1899, but undoubtedly there has been a consistent increase. The demand of the home market is greater than the domestic supply.

"In 1900 our peanut imports amounted to less than $6,000, whereas in the year about to end it will be over a million," says the Transcript. "The prices of peanuts in the foreign markets have advanced more than 200 per cent. Africa and the East Indies are the principal sources of supply. Considering the peanut as a necessity of our social existence and the increase in prices that prevails abroad, might it not be well in any near revision of the tariff to treat it as having outgrown the infant class?"

In other words, Massachusetts wants free peanuts while protecting the sacred codfish from its Newfound

Mr. Winner, representing the street and alley committee, suggested establishing a new route to the city cemetery, via North Washington avenue. After a lengthy talk he suggested an appropriation of $615 to carry out the plans. On motion of Mr. Ilgenfritz, action was deferred until the next meeting.

The special committee reported to the council that the Missouri Pacific should install a light at Quincy avelinue and lights and walks at Ken-Iltucky avenue. The committee also reported that crossings are needed on both sides of the Missouri Pacific and Katy tracks at Third street and Broadway: walks and lights on the north and south sides of Tenth street: walks and team crossing at Katy tracks on Ohio avenue; light and walks on the south side of Kentucky avenue crossing and Katy tracks and crossing at Twentieth street. The report was received and

Mr. DeJarnette asked for an ordinance for sidewalks on both sides of Morgan street between Grand and Stewart avenues.

After allowing all properly audited bills, council adjourned at 9:15 °p m.

French coast are coming home to sail with Evans, and this American armada of nineteen battleships and eight armored cruisers, all of late types, is far superior to the whole Japanee navy at present. The coming session will see what from this time on will be an annual demand on congress to maintain this paramount strength. Congress will also be asked to begin replacing the Atlantic fleet thus shipped away.

A Good Fleet in the East. Curiously enough, this stripping of the Atlantic seaboard will leave a stronger fleet on this side than the whole naval strengh of the country in 1898. The Iowa and Indiana are left, together with the second class Texas. They are now reserve ships, but they are quite capable of fighting. The modern armored cruisers, North Carolina, St. Louis and Montana, and the older Brooklyn and New York, backed by all the torpedo boats, could be combined with these reserve ships to make quite a stout showing. The battleships Mississippi and Idaho will be finished this fall, the New Hampshire next spring.

When the two 20,000 ton battleships just authorized are completed and the South Carolina and Michigan are affoat the Atlantic will again see a formidable American fleet. As Japan is a poor country, now heavily in debt from a burdensome war, the job of having to match dollars with the United States for naval mastery on the Pacific is quite likely to persuade her to take a more modest tone and submit to a second place. This is especially the case since it starts the race in second place. Incidentally, to clinch the matter, congress will probably be hard pressed this winter to give Hawaii and the Philippines real protection in the way of fortifications.

RIDICULE CAUSED SUICIDE

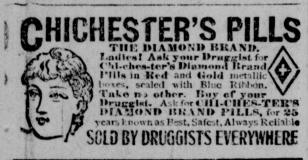

Altoona Doctor Had Backed the "Burning Ashes" Scheme.

Altoona, Pa., July 6.-Dr. H. K. a Hoy, one of the wealthiest physicians of Altoona, committed suicide yesterday by swallowing carbolic acid.

About six months ago Dr. Hoy be came the financial backer of John Ellmore, an Altoona cobbler who said he had discovered a process by which ashes could be burned.

The scheme was widely advertised until scientists showed it to be a fake. > Bonds made here under the old law will be subject to the new law when it shall take effect, but the officers are issuing licenses with the knowledge that the saloons now belong to breweries or their agents. Licenses to be issued after August 11 will require to be granted only after the filing of affidavits that no brewery is interested in the saloon and consequently the brewer must make a bona fide sale of his saloon before the next license is granted even if he does not sell by August 11. It will be possible for the brewers to furnish money to run saloons, although they will be more careful to see that the saloons are in the hands of responsible persons.

Charged That Mrs. Leslie Bore a Let ter Which Purported to Be a Recommendation of a Scheme By the Financier.

London, July 6.-Mrs. Josephine Leslie, whose friends are said to be worth millions, was arrested Thursday in Newmarket, where she had been staying at the best hotel.

Mrs. Leslie was arrested while riding in a motor car. The charge is getting money from widely known families by false pretenses.

Miss Annie Blount, the plaintiff, is a member of an influential Dublin family. Her counsel said that Miss Blount met Mrs. Leslie at a friend's Mrs. Leslie, he said, represented that she was a friend of J. Pierpont Morgan and produced a letter purporting to have been writted by Mr. Morgan advising her to invest in one of his syndicates and promising fabulous profits.

Miss Blount later was a guest of Mrs. Leslie at a London hotel and ultimately she intrusted the latter with $42,500 to invest in the "Morgan

Mrs. Leslie, in return, gave Miss Blount postrated checks for $125,000 and $100,000, it is said, which were supposed to represent profits which would accure to Miss Blount. GOOD TASTE!

AS a general rule a man's good taste or lack of it is shown more by his dress than by any other one thing. Extravagance is by no means necessary, but an occasional refreshment of attire, and a quiet regard for accepted styles is certainly essential.

JOHN MELOY, INSANE, RESISTED ARREST IN BOONE COUN-TY, MISSOURI.

Man Was On His Way From Indiana to San Antonio, Texas, When He Went "Daffy" and Raised a Disturbance.

A man giving his name as John Meloy was brought from Hartsburg Thursday and lodged in jail on account of insanity, says the Columbia Herald. The account of his arrest as given by Constable W. H. Hamilton, of Cedar township, shows lots of re-

Thursday morning a man jumped off of a through west bound freight at Hartsburg before the train stopped. He carried a large table leg and several rocks. He ran through the town and climbed the bluff into the woods. He soon returned and took a seat on the depot platform.

The constable, who happened to be in town, went down to investigate. The man jumped up and began to flourish his table leg and to back off from the officers. At last he broke and ran. Mr. Hamilton secured a hand car and with a few men followed Meloy down the track.

When encircled in a corn field the crazy man threw his rocks at his pursuers and at last kept them off with his table leg. It seemed impossible to detract his attention, but finally Sanford Bledsoe seized him and he

After the return to Hartsburg he was relieved from the rope, but was brought to Columbia by Mr. Hamilton and A. C. Bledsoe on the evening train. On the road from McBaine he struck Mr. Hamilton a blow on the cheek that made him see stars. Meloy spent the night in jail.

The stranger gave his age at 42 years. He said that he was on his way from Memphis, Ind., to San Antonio, Texas. He claims to have a mother 80 years old and two sisters in the former place. At first he claimed not to drink any, but later said that he was just recovering from a $120 drunk. His folks, in Memphis, were notified by wire.

The M., K. and T. officials state that he was in charge of an emigrant outfit for J. H. Haws.

They are the bullies of the reptile world and the biggest cowards. No one need fear them. Even if caught their ability to do damage is not equal to that of a wasp or bumblebee.

"Of all the snakes, real or otherwise, which Mr. Sheridan has conjured up in his imagination through copious draughts of sulphur water, only the copperhead is to be dreaded. The cottonmouth is seldom seen and the rattler is a gentleman who will let you severely alone unless you tread on him or crowd him into a corner. In the 37 years that we have lived here we have yet to hear of a death from the bite of a poisonous

Sleeves are made longer than they

As a rule, sleeves now come well below the elbow and are finished with a flat band. Above the elbow they are finished with a medium puff, while there are of this general style many varieties. While the long shoulder seam is fashionable it is to be noted that but there are plenty of other dressa majority of stylish women look best with the sleeves standing out a little from the shoulder, so featherbones or wire are used to secure the desired effect. In fact, the sleeves are taking up a great deal of attention as to cut, finish and becomingness. The loose, wide sleeves that are a feature of the fashions this year seem to be particularly well adapted to the style that looks like a sleeveless coat worn ever a separate blouse. The armhole is abnormally large, on the kimono order, and is always trimmed with flat band effect. Sometimes may be noticed part of the waist of heavy lace, the part that goes over the shoulder and forms the sleeves. This finished by a flat band of velvet, is most charming, especially when worn over white. An exception to this is in the case of yellow -sulphur yellow voile made up with cream lace. In this instance the different shades of yellow and cream were most artistically blendel.

There is a great deal of fine lace to be noticed on these fine waists. Not only braiding and embroidery, but narrow bands of silk, fancy buttons and a myriad of dainty touches that can be given only by the most careful hand work. There is an immense amount of hand work on even the simplest of these waists, while on the more elaborate ones the work is marvelously fine and intricate, and hand work is necessary on everything at all smart. Corsets, linings and draperies all tend to give the slope, without which curves under the arms the waist is quite passe. Those who are too generously proportioned cleverly draw all the superficial flesh toward the front. But in spite of the fact that great time and thought are given to the moulding of the form, ladies do not go out of the house "in their figures," as the French put it; that is, without a slight veiling of the cutlires, therefore the immense popularity of the tiny little wraps and coats that are never intended for warmth,

It was a fair example of the elaboration used on gowns this year.

Many of the kimono sieeves are so cleverly used with draped bretelles and other bodice arrangements that the one merges into the other. Long tight sleeves of lace or chiffon are found under some of these kimeno sleeves in very smart gowns. These chiffon sleeves are usually tucked style before the vogue is at an end. Some of the conservative dressmakers are taking a strong stand against the elbow sleeve. They declare it has become so common as to be undesirable and they are using the long mitten cuff of lace or tucked chiffon, makers who are turning out their newest gowns with the short sleeves.

The overskirt or tunic, as it is called nowadays, is much in evidence. Many of these, instead of being round and consequently giving the appearance of cutting the figure in two, are made with a deep front and drawn up at the sides or cut up, and draped

Fichu draperies and all sorts of arrangements that slope over the tops of the arms and tuck, back and front, into the deep girdles are seen in the most effective summer frocks that are waiting for winter to make a surety of style. This is a hint for the coming fall's fads. With this fashion come along the open bell sleeve, which in its turn whips up the demand for the bracelet. Those quaint jeweled circlets, copied from trinkets long stored away, are in first favor. Velvet bands with jeweled fastenings are also worn on the neck with waists that are open at must be of moderate price. The craze for embroidery, which has survived a long and strenuous vogue, with no sign of diminishment, has settled down to more sane usages than when it first struck the world of fashion. The more artistic ones have a plain background against which to throw the design.

Striped silk is used to trim many of the plain cloths. A stunning cloth suit with a coat coming well below the knees has revers of green and white taffeta and a collar of white velvet. The green and white striped silk is also introduced into the cuffs. The coat is half fitted, single breasted, left unclosed at the front, and finished on each side with two big covered buttons of green velvet.

SENT TO HOUSE ON THE OUTSKIRTS

during our vacation, were tramping through the Fountainbleau forest, about 50 miles from Paris, says the New York World. On the evening of the 23d of August, a Thursday, we arrived in the small village of Montigny-sur-Loing, about ten miles from Fontainebleau.

We applied for lodging at the only hotel, but were not accomodated, as the place was already full. After vainly trying to find a room in the village itself we were sent to a house on the outskirts on the road from Montigny to Bourron.

The house belonged to an aged woman, who reluctantly consented to rent us a room for the night. The house, which was isolated, was two stories high, rather old, and must have been part of a farm. We were shown into an immense room, with whitewashed walls and tiled floor; the only furniture was an old-fashioned curtained bed, two chairs, a round table resting on a small round carpet, and in the angle of the room an antique clothes closet, such as is still used commonly in France.

After leaving our packs and washing up we returned to the hotel, where we dined. After a smoke we walked The Citizens' National Bank, Sedalia, back slowly, and, being tired after our long tramp, retired.

As was our custom on such trips, we looking under the bed and furniture. We locked both windows and the door, in front of which we placed a

The room was pitch dark, but as raised my head I saw in the middle of the room the forearms of a man. Only the blue sleeves of a blouse from the elbow down and the hands, which were coarse as those of a peasant, could be seen. The most awful thing was that the right hand clasped a knife, a kitchen knife, so far as I could see, held point downward. Although I could not even see my own hands, I could see those arms as perfectly as if in daylight.

After what I think must have been a few seconds the awful thing began to move toward the bed. We were speechless and terror-stricken.

I don't know what would have happened. I own up that I was paralyzed with fright All of a sudden I felt my companion grab the revolver under my pillow and the next instant he fired. Instantly the "vision" disappeared. I heard a cry of pain, then something dropped and all was still. We regained courage, got up, light-

In the morning we took the first train for Paris. Before leaving we settled our bill with the old lady, who denied that she had heard anything during the night. When pressed further she flatly refused to answer our questions. At the station, while waiting for the train, the agent told us that the house had been reputed to be haunted for years, and that the old peasant woman who lived there alone was the granddaughter of a man who had been found murdered years ing the evening.

I left France soon after that, but the terror of that awful night is still fresh in my mind. I had always scoffed at supernatural things, but I) now know that there are things we cannot fathom.

less yellow cat, after three deliberate attempts to bring its existence to an end, lay down on the car tracks at Cedar avenue, S. E., and East Thirtyeighth street and was decapitated by a passing Cedar avenue car.

Among those wno witnessed the suicide of the cat, and several of its unsuccessful attempts at self-destruction, are Fred J. Miller, a druggist at No. 3910 Cedar avenue, S. E., and Patrolman Sager, of the Perkins avenue station.

A kindhearted ice man played a part in the first attempt at suicide. As he was driving along Cedar avenue he noticed the cat lying in the road directly in the path of the oncoming horse and wagon. Bringing his horse to a standstill he jumped off the wagon, ran to the cat, picked it up and placed it in a nearby yard.

A few minutes afterward it ran from the yard just as a Cleveland electric track sprinkler was approach. ing and deliberately threw itself on the track. The motorman stopped the car and did exactly as the ice man had done.

By this time the strange actions of the cat begun to attract general attention. Mr. Miller had noticed the cat as it ran to the road the second time, and just as he was telling Patrolman Sager of the incident the cat again made its appearance.

As a car was approaching Mr. Miller called a small boy near by. The youngster picked the cat up, and for the third time it was carried back to the yard.

The fourth attempt was successful. Patrolman Sager saw the cat run to the track a few moments before the next car came. It lay down deliberately in such a manner that the head | from their journey's end by McFar- in the secretariat, and of these the was almost completely severed from land the body as the car passed over it

OF THE MONARCHS WHO RULE IN THE COUNTRIES OF THE OLD WORLD.

TAKE SOME ONE INTO CONFIDENCE

Other Monarchs Are Very Careful in Order That There May Be No "Leaks."

There is a sense in which monarchs have no secrets, says Cassell's Saturday Journal. In the nature of things they are compelled by the necessities of their position to take some one into their confidence with part these confidences are jealously guarded, and in a hundred and one ways the public curiosity has to satisfy itself with more or less plausible "guesses at truth."

To take an example, the last will Mrs. Hamilton and her daughter, and testament of Queen Victoria has Rebecca, are engaged in the dress- never been disclosed, as the law of making business at Laporte, where probate does not apply to the sovereign of the realm. These are known to but three courtiers, and only one schedule of them, it may be said with confidence, is in existence People profess to know of large purchases of West End ground rents, of huge committments in American railways, and so forth. For the most part, however, these securities are held in the names of trusty intimates who are themselves large investors, and no estimates of his majesty's personal estate has any value what ever. Many Euorpean sovereigns, especially in the more restless portions of the continent, are said with much reason to keep the bulk of their private fortunes in the strong rooms of the Rothschilds and other financial houses in London and else where, where their secrets are invio-

One veteran monarch, to the writer's knowledge, conducted his private business with his London agents through the medium of a young Englishman whose duties were quite un suspected even by his own relatives. The German emperor incloses all his private letters in waterproof envelopes of a special make. He is believed to make freer use of secret devices in corresponding with his ministers and others than any other European monarch, and there is no doubt that his private safes contain a mass of secret intelligence, stratesic memoranda, made by his own hand, and other matter which, in this country, are left to the departments responsible for such things. It is understood that he keeps no private Kaiser Uses Waterproof Letters and diary, but the Empress Augusta has been accustomed ever since her marriage to commit her thoughts on current affairs to writing, and each January the diary for the previous year is locked and preserved in her jewel

The czar of Russia has a heavy burden to bear, by reason of the suspicion with which he is compelled to regard even his most intimate courtiers. He is known to keep a private record to which no one besides respect to almost every detail of the empress has access, and there is their daily life. But for the most no doubt that many things which, in happier surroundings, would be freely discussed with his courtiers, are shared by the empress alone. His absolute control of the treasury enables him to conduct his personal finances in the greatest secrecy.

The qualifications are many and rare. He should be bright, quick, prompt, genial, magnetic. He should possess the elements of leadership. He must have tact; he must be wise, energetic, discreet, resourceful; he should be able to command the absolute confidence, the love, the sympa thy, the co-operation of the school that he is attempting to serve.

Second-Teachers, Trained, intelligent, consecrated, prayerful teachers, usually young or in middle life, are needed in the Sunday school. Teachers who love God and love the Bible, and love children; those who have genial, pleasant manners; those who have the faculty to teach, the disposition to study, and the determination to be prompt and regular in their attendance. Success depends very largely upon the personality of the teacher.

A delightful morning meeting of the Priscilla club was held with Miss from 10 to 12 o'clock at her cottage in the Springs grounds. The charmirg capabilities of Miss Harwood as a hostess are known to scores of her friends in this and other cities who have enjoyed her hospitality. This meeting, which was the last club meeting until fall, was one of the most pleasant of the entire season. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Marmaduke Harwood and Misses Katherine Harwood and Edna Evans. The younger society people of the city were entertained Wednesday evening at a Fourth of July party, given by Miss Gem Binkley in honor of the young ladies in her house party. This hospitable home has been the scene of many delightful functions, and this one was up to the usual standard. The decocations were in red, white and blue, and the fact of its being the anniversary of the eve of the nation's birthday, was emphasized in every feature of the entertainment. Master of Languages, and Gained a Remarkable Influence Over His Classes--A Biographical Sketch.

The following account of the death of Prof. Isaac Sprecher, a brother of Samuel Sprecher and uncle of Sheriff I. N. and Will Sprecher, of this city, appeared in a recent issue of the Blue Ridge Zephyr, printed at Waynesbore, Pa.:

Prof. Isaac Sprecher died at his The Balmaceda famliy contended residence, 48 Philadelphia avenue, et 11:20 o'clock last night, from an attack of heart trouble. His death was sudden. He had not been in robust health for several years, but had been as well as usual when he retired to his bed about 8:30 o'clock.

About 11:10 he called to his daughter, Miss Anna Sprecher, and told her that he was suffering much pain. She realized when she went to his bedside that he was sinking rapidly Chattanooga, Tenn., July 6.-Great and hurried to the residence of Counindignation was stirred up here when cilman S. E.
